

boss faces hostile reception It is highly likely that an Arsenal manager will face a hostile reception from opposition fans in any ground due to their status as one of the top clubs in England. The manager can expect to be jeered and taunted from supporters of their opponents when they visit grounds up and down the country. Visiting fans may also display banners and use other forms of non-violent protest to express their displeasure with the manager or the team's recent performances.